Homily

Second Sunday of Lent

Dear parishioners, how are you?
There is a unique housing system in Korea that does not exist in the United States. It is called the "jeans (傳貰)" system. In this system, the tenant pays a lump sum deposit to the landlord and uses the property for a contract period. When the contract ends, the landlord must vacate the property based on the tenant's decision. If the tenant raises the deposit amount, the landlord must either pay the increased amount to renew the lease or move elsewhere. When I was young, owning a home was a dream like most ordinary people. I remember moving frequently as a child. In my childhood, we moved six times - first to a rice shop, then to Mijin's house, a tobacco shop, Jae-wrong's house, the twins' house, and finally my grandmother's house. It wasn't until I was in sixth grade that my family finally settled into a home where we no longer had to move. My mother was overjoyed. I, too, felt relieved, as I no longer had to be mindful of the homeowner's children. Back then, there was a weekly national "housing lottery." Program. If you are the winner the winning was enough to buy a house. In two years,

St. Andrew Kim Catholic Church in Dallas will celebrate its 50th anniversary. The current church building is the third one in its history. The first Church was located at Swiss Avenue downtown, the so-called "Downtown Church." It was originally built by a German immigrant community, but as the German population was absorbed by the mainstream church; the Korean community began celebrating Mass there. As the Korean parishioners grew and the Downtown Church was small and had limited parking space, the parishioners desired a larger and more spacious church and purchased land in Las Colinas. Before building a new church, they temporarily moved to a different location. Since the temporary church was in a warehouse building, parishioners referred to it as the "Warehouse Church." Some wanted to build the church on the newly purchased land, while others suggested buying a church building in the northern part of the city, where new migrants were settling. After much deliberation, a decision was made to build the church at its current location. This beautiful church was built with the sweat and tears of the parishioners. In March 2017, the new church was completed and consecrated. It has now been eight years since that time.

In today's First Reading, Abram receives two blessings from God—one is the blessing of land, and the other is the blessing of descendants. Owning a homeafter much hardship is a great joy and blessing. Building and consecrating a
A beautiful church after 40 years is also a great joy. However, what is even more important is the life of the family that resides in that home. Even if one lives in a large and spacious house, if there is no love, faith, or hope, that house cannot be a happy home where God's will is fulfilled. On the other hand, even if a family moves six times, if love flourishes in the home, if faith grows, and if hope bears fruit, that house will be a happy home where God's will is fulfilled. Likewise, if a newly built, beautiful church lacks love, faith, and hope within its community, it cannot be a happy church where God's will is realized. Even when Mass was celebrated under difficult conditions in the Downtown Church, and even when the community gathered in the Warehouse Church, if love flourished, if faith grew, and if hope bore fruit, those churches became places where God's will be fulfilled.

In today's Gospel, Jesus is transfigured in glory, and Moses and Elijah appear and speak with Him. Peter suggests building three tents to remain there together. However, Peter did not fully understand the significance of the Transfiguration. Jesus' transfiguration was meant to reveal that, as foretold in the Law and the Prophets, His glorious resurrection could only come through suffering. Peter did not understand or accept Jesus' suffering and pain, insisting that such things should never happen. In response, Jesus rebuked him, saying, "Get behind me, Satan! You are thinking not as God does, but as human beings do." Religion is about interpreting life. It shows us the path we must follow. Faith is about understanding life through God's perspective and following the path. He has laid it out for us. Since we have come from God, we must return to God. To do so, we must follow His will. That is why today's Second Reading states: "Join with others in being imitators of me and observing those who thus conduct themselves according to the model you have in us. The Lord Jesus Christ, by the power that enables Him also to bring all things into subjection to Himself, will change our lowly body to conform with His glorified body." A beautiful church and a strong community are important, however they must ultimately serve the glory of God. "This is my chosen Son; listen to Him."
