Homily

Mass for the Evangelization of Peoples
(World Mission Sunday)

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ.
Today is World Mission Sunday—a day to pray for missionaries around the world and to reflect on how we ourselves can share the Good News. In 2002, I was given a new assignment—not as a parish priest, but as a special ministry priest. My new role was as Director of Adult Faith Formation in the diocesan pastoral office. During the annual "Day of Priestly Sanctification," I was invited to share my pastoral experiences from my time in the parish. I spoke about three stories that had deeply shaped my ministry.

1. The "Transportation Ministry"
At the parish where I served—Jeokseong Parish—the area was wide and public transportation was almost nonexistent. Together with the parishioners, we organized a volunteer transport ministry. Every Sunday morning at 9:00 a.m., four vans gathered for prayer before setting out to pick up parishioners from their homes. On holidays like Lunar New Year and Chuseok, the sister and I would drive ourselves. In three years, we never had a single accident—a grace we were deeply thankful for. Some parishioners even brought the produce they harvested to share with the community. By 10:00 a.m. every Sunday, the vans would arrive faithfully at the church, filled with smiling faces. I remember Christmas of 2001—after Midnight Mass, we stepped outside to find snow up to our knees. We couldn't drive home. So everyone stayed at church, shared food, and spent the night together celebrating the birth of Christ. The next morning, when the snow had melted a little, we safely drove everyone home.

2. The "Farmers' Direct Trade Project"Our parish had beekeepers, cabbage farmers, rice growers, and grape producers. With the help of the local agricultural cooperative, we created packaging materials for direct farm-to-church sales. I personally visited parishes in Seoul to promote the project, and many supported it wholeheartedly. Farmers sold their produce directly to parishes, and many donated part of their profits back to our parish. This initiative later led to exchange programs—students from Seoul came for summer camps, and parish councils visited us for training retreats.

3. The "Taekwondo Class"
During home visits, I met a Taekwondo instructor. I asked him if he could teach at the parish, and he gladly agreed. The program began with seven students, but soon grew to over a hundred. We charged no tuition and even provided free uniforms, thanks to generous benefactors. While the children practiced, the sister taught them catechism—and when they were baptized, their parents often came to church too. That testimony was later shared at the diocesan level, and the diocese invited me to work at the pastoral headquarters in Myeong-dong—the heart of the Archdiocese of Seoul. I had moved from one of the smallest parishes to the very center of the archdiocese.

The Spirit of Mission
Today, as we celebrate Mission Sunday, we pray for missionaries, but we are also called to become missionaries ourselves—in our families, workplaces, and communities. Those who are most active in evangelization don't necessarily have wealth, education, or spare time. Many are busy with work, caring for families, or running small shops. So what makes them such powerful evangelizers? It's because they follow the way of Jesus. How did Jesus evangelize?

First, Jesus reached out in person.
He met everyone—men and women, rich and poor, healthy and sick, powerful and outcast. He gave comfort to the sorrowful, strength to the weary, and courage to the fearful. Second, Jesus taught by example. He showed that true evangelization is not through words alone but through actions. He washed the feet of His disciples, called them to be servants, and carried His own cross before asking others to carry theirs. He described Himself as the Good Shepherd who knows His sheep, leads them to still waters, protects them from danger, and lays down His life for them. His life was His message.

Third, Jesus did not work alone. He called imperfect, ordinary disciples to share in His mission. Though they were weak, He trusted them, empowered them, and worked with them. He believed that the Kingdom of God—though as small as a mustard seed—would one day bear great fruit. Jesus was patient, hopeful, and faithful to the end. Fourth, Jesus always prayed. He withdrew to quiet places to pray, even shedding tears of blood in Gethsemane. He prayed not for His own will, but for the will of the Father to be done. Prayer, He showed us, is the source and foundation of every mission. Fifth, Jesus was courageous. Though He had no possessions and no guarantees for tomorrow, He remained bold and confident in His Father. He never compromised with injustice or bowed to power. He spoke truth to the powerful, yet was gentle and merciful to the poor, the weary, and the brokenhearted.

A Reflection on Mission and Happiness
I once read a short but profound line: "Happiness is not doing what you like, but liking what you must do." Evangelizing, helping others, sharing love, and sacrificing for our neighbors may not always be things we like to do. But if these are the things we must do as followers of Christ, then let us learn to love doing them.And when we do, that's where true happiness begins.
