Palm Sunday of the Lord's Passion
Dear parishioners,
During my priesthood, there have been several individuals who had caused me pain. There was someone who couldn't make difference between parish property and personal belongings. One of parishioner took a ladder from the church to fix his home without permission. I had to call him to bring it back. Despite well educated, easy going and articulate his life was collection of confused and wrong decision making. He always showed up for social events while frequently made excuses to avoid difficult tasks or volunteer works. Though always cheerful there was something missing since his actions didn't match his outward demeanor. Despite his diligent service in the church, he had to face criticism in his apartment complex. It was disheartening to see discrepancies between his church behavior and outside the church. There was a person who would loudly criticize those with different opinions without listening to them first. His departure always left a mess that was difficult to clean up. While it was admirable how proactive and driven they were, it was saddening to see them try to do everything alone. There was someone who toppled their accomplishments due to excessive drinking. They were usually quiet, well-behaved, and good at volunteer work, but after excessive drinking, it changed them. It was painful to see alcohol, meant for human enjoyment, become a source of broken human being and family. There have also been individuals who provided me with great comfort and strength during my priesthood. Some believer quietly helped others without seeking recognition. I once witnessed a parishioner riding his bike to church during heavy rain. He closed all doors and windows of the church and cleared the drains. Then, I saw him praying humbly in front of statue of Mary. That image remains vivid in my memory even after 33 years.

There was a man who owned a mill made extra rice cake and distribute it to the elderly on holidays. Another parishioner provided scholarships for financially disadvantaged children. I only learned later that the mayor had awarded him a commendation. I still remember the warmth of his service-oriented heart. There was an elder who always protected the Church and he was like a large rock or an old fir tree in the neighborhood. He handcraft cradles for infants during Christmas. Whenever I returned from a trip, he would ask how it went. His home always smelled of prayer, and a worn-out Bible placed at the center of the room. He was always there to support those in need in the community, visiting the sick and praying for them. He mentored many aspirants, ensuring many godsons. He faithfully carried out the mission Jesus gave to his disciples—curing the sick, casting out demons, and preaching the Gospel. My ability to serve as a priest for 33 years is thanks to the prayers, service, dedication, and passion of such individuals.

On the road of Jesus' passion, some caused him pain. There was Judas. We often see betrayal inflicted upon close friends or those with whom we've shared much. We witness this even in our churches. Even among leaders of organizations, we sometimes see them revel in others' misfortunes when they're not present. Such betrayals can occur among priests, nuns, and laypeople alike. During my time in the diocese, I've encountered individuals who would send anonymous letters to the church, criticizing and blaming the priest. Ironically, these individuals were often close companions of the priest. I, too, feel unsure about comparing myself to Judas, saying, "It's not me!"

Then, there's Peter. We often encounter people like Peter—model students who receive much praise and are diligent in prayer and study. Peter denied knowing Jesus three times in crucial moments. There are those who, in critical moments, prioritize their interests and positions. When I reflect on moments when Jesus was with me during difficult times, I wonder if I've always been there for him when he needed me. Some comforted Jesus on the road to his passion. At the fifth station of the cross, Simon helps Jesus carry the cross. According to tradition, Simon, a Cyrenian passerby, was compelled to carry the cross for Jesus. We don't know what Simon thought as he carried Jesus' cross or how difficult it was for him. Instead, we should reflect on ourselves. Sometimes we find ourselves doing things we don't have to. For example, if the parish priest suddenly falls ill or goes on a trip, the assistant priest must celebrate Mass and attend various meetings on his behalf. When this happens, we should ask ourselves if we do it with genuine joy or out of obligation. At the sixth station of the cross, Veronica wipes Jesus' face with a towel. There is no mention of Veronica in the Bible, but tradition says she was a woman from Jerusalem who wiped the blood and sweat from Jesus' face as he carried the cross to Golgotha. When she later looked at the towel, she saw an image of Jesus' face imprinted on it. From then on, she was known as Veronica, which means "true image" in Latin. The fate of this woman has been passed down through various legends.

Today is Palm Sunday of the Lord's Passion. It would be good time to reflect on whether my words and actions bring comfort to Jesus or cause him pain. We should all aspire to carry Jesus' cross like Simon of Cyrene and wipe his face as Veronica did.
