Homily

Second Sunday of Easter (Divine Mercy Sunday)

Greetings, fellow believers. Pablo Neruda, a poet and revolutionary from Chile, once said: "Life is ambiguous yet clear. Nature is fleeting yet abundant. The universe is infinite yet indifferent." There are two clear things in life, they say. One is being born, and the other is dying. Life is like a tunnel between birth and death. In the darkness of this tunnel, we create numerous stories of life. Clouds in the sky take various forms but hold no inherent meaning. Over eternity, nature has created countless things. What gives them meaning is that we call them by name. We create 'concepts' within those names. Poet Kim Chun-su said, "Before I called his name, he was just a gesture. When I called his name, he came to me and became a flower." The universe shows an infinity beyond our imagination. When we behold this infinite universe, we marvel and feel reverence. Naturally, we think of the Absolute who made this universe possible. Faithful people call this Absolute 'God' because on the vast canvas of the universe, apart from God, we cannot draw stars.

"Peace be with you!" These were the words Jesus spoke to His disciples after His resurrection. Happiness and peace are akin. A happy person can be at peace, and a peaceful person can be happy. Jesus said, "Peace be with you," acknowledging how challenging and difficult it is to achieve peace, just as it is challenging to attain happiness. People desire peace and happiness, yet in the reality of life, peace is often elusive. Why are we not at peace? I believe there are several reasons. First is greed. Greed is like drinking seawater; the more you drink, the thirstier you become. Having wealth, gaining honor, acquiring power alone does not bring true peace. Second is anger and resentment. It's hard to feel peace when we blame our lack of health, business failures, or disappointments on meeting the wrong parents, neighbors, or timing. Third is worry and anxiety. The disciples had worries and anxieties. They didn't know if they would face the same fate as Jesus, carrying the cross. No matter how much one possesses, if there is worry and anxiety, peace is elusive.

Jesus overcame these conditions of unrest, which allowed Him to share peace with His disciples. Even in the moment of death, Jesus said, "It is finished." He also said to people, "Do not worry; those who are thirsty and hungry should come to me. My yoke is light and easy. Do not worry about tomorrow; God feeds the birds of the sky and clothes the flowers of the fields. So, do not worry." Resurrected Jesus appeared to His disciples in three ways. First was through His words. He spoke tenderly to Mary Magdalene, to the disciples going to Emmaus, and to the fearful apostles. Second was by showing His hands and feet, even inviting Thomas to touch Him to dispel doubts. Third was by sharing meals with them. He prepared and shared fish with them, urging them to bring the fish they caught. He conversed with the disciples while dining at Emmaus.

During the time of resurrection, I believe our attitude should be similar. We should be witnesses who share the words of life and joy with our neighbors. We must discard words that kill, hurt, or bring division and instead speak words of love, sharing, joy, and peace. Secondly, just as Jesus showed His hands and feet pierced on the cross, showed His side pierced by the spear, we must show our sacrifice and love through our actions. Our hands and feet should become like those of Jesus on the cross. They should become the same hands that reached out to the poor. Thirdly, we must share what we have. The early church shared their possessions without condition. Believers should be able to share more than those who did not have faith. It's not about having plenty to share; sharing makes us better off. It's like losing weight not by shedding pounds but by becoming healthier. "The community of believers was of one heart and mind, and no one claimed that any of his possessions was his own, but they had everything in common. With great power the apostles bore witness to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, and great favor was accorded them all. There was no needy person among them."
