Homily

10th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Dear Parishioners, how are you? On May 15th, it was Buddha's Birthday, so I visited Bohyeon Buddhist Temple near Dallas. The monks mentioned that they also visited our church just before Christmas to commemorate the birth of Jesus. So, I have to return the congratulatory visit.

I had an interesting experience at Bohyeon Temple. The head monk of the temple was a female. I just assumed the head monk would be a male, so I was slightly surprised. I waited in the temple area as they were still in a ritual. The monk was striking a wooden block and chanting sutras. I waited ten minutes, and I observed the ritual which was quite different from our church services. The monk continuously struck the wooden block and recited chants, and the followers joined in. Our church services are centered around the liturgy of the Word and the liturgy of the Eucharist, while the temple's ritual seemed to revolve around the wooden block and chanting.

In the church, we have an altar and pews for the congregation, mostly consisting of chairs. In contrast, the temple had mats on the floor for people to sit on instead of chairs. After the ritual, I had tea with the monk before leaving. The monk invited me to join them for a meal, but I only stayed for tea.

I found common ground in the monk's words. When Catholicism first came to the East, there were cultural differences and challenges. Similarly, Buddhism faces difficulties as it spreads to the West. Since Buddha's Birthday is not a public holiday in America, the celebration was moved to a Sunday. I thought it would be nice if Buddha's Birthday could become a public holiday in America someday.

Today, God asks Adam, "Adam, where are you?" It's not because God didn't know where Adam was. God who created the world and Adam surely knew where Adam was. God asks a similar question to Cain who is Adam's son: "Cain, where is your brother Abel?" Again, it's not because God didn't know where Abel was. We can see this from Adam and Cain's answers. Adam answered, "I heard you in the garden, and I was afraid because I was naked, so I hid." Adam speaks about his fear and nakedness before stating where he is. Then God asks, "Who told you that you were naked? Have you eaten from the tree that I commanded you not to eat from?" Similarly, God did not initially accuse Adam of sin. He let Adam realize his wrongdoing. Cain responded to God, "I don't know. Am I my brother's keeper?" To this, God replied, "What have you done? Listen! Your brother's blood cries out to me from the ground." Again, God did not initially accuse Cain of sin. He let Cain realize his wrongdoing. Reflecting on this, it doesn't seem very important where Monk Ji-am of Bohyeon Temple or Father Gabriel Cho of St. Andrew Kim Church is. I think it would be difficult for me to become a monk, not just because I've been a priest of Jesus for 33 years, but also because the atmosphere and culture of the temple are unfamiliar to me.

Monk Ji-am has been the head monk at Bohyeon Temple for 17 years and has also interacted with previous Korean priests. It would be difficult for the monk to become a church priest, not only because she has been a monk for over 30 years but also because the atmosphere and culture of the church are unfamiliar to her. I believe Buddha and God would not ask the monk and me where we are, but rather what we are doing. If the monk eradicates greed, anger, and ignorance, spreads Buddha's teachings to followers, and lives a life of the Eightfold Path, she can confidently answer Buddha's call with, "Yes! Here I am." Similarly, if I convey the teachings of the evangelical virtue and theological virtue to the congregation and follow the Lord's cross, I can confidently answer God's call with, "Yes! I am here." Just as God did not accuse us of our sins first, we should give those who wronged us a chance to repent before accusing them of their sins.

In today's Gospel, Jesus redefines the 'boundary' of siblings and parents. He tells us to go beyond blood relations. Just as those who spread Buddha's compassion and teachings are all Buddhists, those who follow God's will and spread His teachings are all God's children. "Whoever does God's will be my brother sister and mother."
