The Feast of the Presentation of the Lord

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ,
Greetings to you all.
Today is the Feast of the Presentation of the Lord, a day on which the Church also commemorates the consecrated life. As we meditate on the moment when the infant Jesus was presented in the Temple, we are invited to reflect on the meaning of offering our lives to God.
I recall the moment of my own consecration: August 23, 1991, the day of my ordination to the priesthood. During the ordination rite, there is a moment for the "Litany of the Saints." At that time, everyone present, including the bishop and the congregation, kneels and prays to all the saints, asking that the new priests be sanctified in their calling. Meanwhile, the candidates for ordination lie prostrate, imploring God's mercy. As I lay there, memories from my time in the seminary came flooding back—those who prayed for me, my mentors, my fellow seminarians with whom I shared dreams of a priestly vocation, and even the struggles and doubts I faced. At the conclusion of the litany, we rose and answered "Yes" to the Lord's call.

In today's Gospel, Mary and Joseph present the infant Jesus in the Temple. This act is not merely a fulfillment of Jewish law but a profound expression of their total dedication to God. Offering oneself reveals humanity's innate longing: we all live for something, commit to something, and strive toward a greater purpose. Henry David Thoreau, a 19th-century American writer, sought to find the essence of life by living simply in the woods, as described in his book Walden. He remarked, "We must simplify life, leaving only what is essential, and discard the rest." Through such dedication, he sought true freedom and fulfillment. Likewise, simplicity and devotion are essential in our faith journey. For what do we live? What do we offer to God? I have visited Walden Pond in Boston several times. While America's greatness may lie in its economy and culture, its true foundation rests on thinkers like Thoreau.

The Temple is more than a physical structure; it is a space where our relationship with God is realized. In today's Gospel, Simeon and Anna meet Jesus in the Temple and experience the fulfillment of their lifelong hope. The Temple is a space of profound encounter with God and sanctification of our relationships. Where is our Temple today? It might be the church, but it could also be our homes, workplaces, or everyday relationships. Philosopher Martin Buber's "I-Thou" theory expands the concept of the Temple into relational spaces. When we truly meet and love others, that place becomes a Temple where God dwells. For example, in the military, chaplains celebrate Mass at frontline posts, where barbed wire fences serve as the altar. In such moments, the frigid sentry post becomes a sacred Temple. I, too, have celebrated Mass in the wilderness, where the desert served as a sanctuary and a rock as the altar, reminiscent of Moses worshipping with the Israelites in the wilderness.

Today is also the Day of Consecrated Life. Religious men and women dedicate their lives wholly to God, bringing love and hope to the world. However, consecration is not reserved for religious alone. Every believer can live a consecrated life by dedicating their daily lives to God. Parents offer their love and sacrifice in raising children, while workers sanctify their tasks through honesty and diligence. Remembering God in the small moments of daily life and practicing love is how we embody the spirit of consecrated life. St. Thérèse of Lisieux lived a "Little Way," dedicating the small acts of everyday life to God and thereby achieving sanctity.

On the Feast of the Presentation, we bless candles, symbols of light that shine in the darkness, giving warmth even as they burn away. This reflects the ideal of our lives. In the winter of 2024, young people in Korea carried not only candles but also light sticks, dreaming of a new world. Even our small light can spark transformation in someone's life. On this Feast of the Presentation, let us reflect on our lives. For what are we living, and to whom do we dedicate our lives? God calls us to be His Temple, shining His light through us to the world. May we practice love and hope and live lives of consecration, wholly dedicated to Him. "Behold, I send my messenger who will prepare the way before me. And suddenly the Lord whom you seek will come to His Temple." Let us live as the light and love of Christ, consecrated to His call.

Pastor Je Hyoung Cho
