Homily

The 6th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Dear parishioners, how are you?
While browsing the internet, I came across an interesting story.
"A snake was slithering along when it got a small cut from a saw. Angry, the snake glared at the saw and bit it. This time, it suffered a severe wound in its mouth. Regaining its strength, the snake coiled tightly around the saw, determined to stop it from breathing. Eventually, the snake's body was cut into pieces, and it died." The snake seems truly foolish. If it had accepted the initial wound and ignored the saw, it would not have suffered a mouth injury. Even after being hurt, if it had let go, it would not have died. But is it only the snake that behaves this way? As a child, I acted just like that snake. While playing with a close friend, he accidentally tore my notebook. Angry, I tore his book in retaliation. He, too, became furious and broke my pencil. I got even angrier and ripped his bag. In the end, our teacher found out, and both of us got scolded. If I had simply ignored my torn notebook and told my friend not to do it again, neither the broken pencil, the torn book, nor the ripped bag would have happened. We wouldn't have been scolded either. Sometimes, an impulsive temper and a failure to control anger can cause not only harm to oneself but also great damage to one's family. That is why a proverb warns us, "Burning down the entire house just to catch a bedbug."

Zhuangzi left us a wise lesson about controlling anger through a story called The Empty Boat "If, while crossing a river, an empty boat drifts toward and collides with yours, even an impatient person will not get angry. However, if someone is in the boat, you will shout for them to move aside. If they do not respond, you will shout again. If they still do not move after three warnings, you will eventually start to curse. Earlier, you did not get angry because it was an empty boat, but now you are furious because there is someone inside. If a person can empty themselves and navigate the river of life like an empty boat, who can harm them?" Even while living far from Korea, I still hear news from home. Every day, the news is filled with political affairs. Eventually, everything will be judged according to the law and principles, just as water naturally flows into the sea, and after a set time, stability will be restored. However, my mind remains unsettled because I have not yet learned to make it like an empty boat. Instead of watching the news, when I listen to the Word of God and music, my heart feels at peace. The same applies to parish life. Even simple issues can become complicated when emotions get involved. If we can overlook small wounds, if we can make our hearts like an empty boat, then even in the midst of storms, we will find peace.

Faith does not grow simply by acting first. Faith grows by first listening to the Word of the Lord. Today's Scripture teaches us the true standard of happiness. It is not about possessions. It is not about fulfilling personal desires. It is about trusting and following God. Today's First Reading declares "Blessed is the one who trusts in the Lord, whose confidence is in Him. They will be like a tree planted by the water that sends out its roots by the stream. It does not fear when heat comes; its leaves are always green. It has no worries in a year of drought and never fails to bear fruit. Blessed is the one who does not walk in step with the wicked or stand in the way that sinners take or sit in the company of mockers, but whose delight is in the law of the Lord, and who meditates on His law day and night. Whatever they do prospers." Pain and sorrow may come like dark clouds, but they cannot erase the sun in the sky. Those who trust in God can see the hope that shines beyond suffering and sadness. This is the path walked by Abraham, our father in faith. This is the path walked by the prophets. This is the path walked by the saints. This is the path walked by the faithful of this era, who willingly accepted poverty, suffering, and even death for the glory of God.

In today's Gospel, Jesus proclaims that happiness does not come from possessing wealth. Even if one is poor, sorrowful, suffering, or persecuted, they are blessed if they trust in God. Why? Because God is with them. Because God will comfort their sorrow, pain, and suffering. Conversely, even if one is rich, successful, powerful, and living in abundance, if they do not place their trust in God, they are truly unfortunate. Why? Because when we leave this world, we take neither wealth, power, nor fame with us. What we must store up in heaven are love, devotion, and sharing.

Nietzsche once said, "A ship sailing a long voyage cannot avoid storms and always travel in calm waters. To a ship on a long voyage, a storm is like a friend." Some of you may be encountering storms on the long journey of life. Perhaps your ship is being shaken by rough waves. Instead of praying to avoid storms, let us pray for the strength and courage to endure and overcome them. When we do so, we will meet the Lord in the midst of the storm. And when we feel the power of the Lord, we will experience the true joy and happiness of life, even in the most difficult situations.

In today's Second Reading, Saint Paul tells us where we must go. That place is the Kingdom of eternal life "If only for this life we have hope in Christ, we are of all people most to be pitied. But Christ has indeed been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of those who have fallen asleep."
