Homily

Solemnity of All Saints

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ, Today we celebrate the Solemnity of All Saints and begin November, the month dedicated to praying for the faithful departed. We honor not only the well-known saints but also countless holy men and women who lived ordinary lives and entered God's loving embrace. The Book of Revelation describes them as "a great multitude, which no one could count," coming from every nation, race, people, and language. Among them are popes, bishops, and priests, as well as parents, workers, and farmers. Some were never recognized by the world, yet they shared food with the poor, cared for sick family members, endured hardships patiently, and comforted those in sorrow. Saints are not necessarily people with extraordinary abilities. They are people who seek God's will and practice love in their everyday lives.

Jesus tells us, "Ask and it will be given to you; seek and you will find; knock and the door will be opened to you." These words remind me of an experience at a parish in Fort Worth. A wooded area next to the church had become a place where homeless people stayed, causing several problems. Instead of simply complaining, the pastor searched for the property owner and explained the parish's situation. Surprisingly, the owner donated the land to the parish. If the pastor had done nothing, nothing would have changed. But because he searched, knocked, and asked, a new opportunity opened. The saints lived with this same spirit. They did not give up in difficult times but continued seeking God's will. They knocked not only on the doors of the powerful but also on the hearts of the poor and lonely. Rather than asking God merely to fulfill their desires, they prayed for the courage and wisdom to do His will.

I had a similar experience while serving as a pastor in Seoul. In 2010, Typhoon Kompasu knocked down many trees on the hillside behind our church and damaged a retaining wall near a neighboring apartment complex. When the mayor of Seoul visited, I suggested cutting back part of the hillside to prevent future damage. Thankfully, the necessary work was carried out, and the parish gained some much-needed space. Looking back, I realize that it was not because of any special ability I possessed. There was a need, I met people, and I knocked on doors. God opened a new path through these encounters. Sometimes we imagine that God answers our prayers by sending something directly from heaven. Yet often, God answers by encouraging us to take the first step and opening the hearts of others. Becoming a saint does not mean performing miracles. It means trusting in God's grace and taking one small step of love each day.

In today's Gospel, Jesus proclaims the eight Beatitudes. Blessed are the poor in spirit, those who mourn, the meek, those who hunger and thirst for righteousness, the merciful, the clean of heart, the peacemakers, and those persecuted for righteousness. The world teaches that happiness comes from wealth, success, and recognition. Jesus, however, shows us a different path. The saints are those who followed the Beatitudes. Whether a bishop or a parish priest gives us Holy Communion, we receive the same Jesus Christ. Whether bread is delivered by a bakery owner or an employee, what matters is that good bread reaches those who need it. Likewise, we may have different responsibilities within the Church, but we proclaim one Gospel, share one love, and serve one Lord. Our titles do not make us holy. What matters is how faithfully we love, share, and serve others.

November is also a time to remember our deceased parents, relatives, friends, and benefactors. Today, on All Saints' Day, we honor those who enjoy eternal life with God. Tomorrow, on All Souls' Day, we pray especially for those who are still undergoing purification. Death reminds us that we must leave behind our titles, possessions, and worldly honors. We cannot take with us the title of president, chairman, bishop, or priest. Even our lives are gifts temporarily entrusted to us by God. Therefore, November is not only a month for remembering the dead but also an opportunity to reflect on our own lives. One day, we too will stand before God. What matters is not how much we possessed, but how much we shared; not what position we held, but whom we served; not how high we climbed, but how willingly we reached down to help others.

The saints are not distant figures whom we can only admire. Through Baptism, we too have become children of God and are called to holiness. Saint John reminds us in today's second reading, "See what love the Father has bestowed on us that we may be called the children of God. Yet so we are." When the doors of life seem closed, do not give up. Seek God's will, follow the Beatitudes, and knock on the door of love.

Instead of seeking higher positions, find someone to serve. Instead of seeking more possessions, ask for a generous heart. Comfort those who mourn, bring peace where there is conflict, and become a friend to the lonely. Those who live the Beatitudes day by day are the saints of our own time. As we begin this month of remembrance, let us pray for our beloved departed and continue walking the path of love and mercy, so that one day we may join all the saints in the presence of God. "Blessed are the clean of heart, for they will see God. Blessed are the peacemakers, for they will be called children of God."
