Homily

The Solemnity of Our Lord Jesus Christ, King of the Universe

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ,
Today we celebrate the Solemnity of Our Lord Jesus Christ, King of the Universe. On this day, the Church invites us to reflect on two important questions: "Whom do I recognize as the king of my life? What kind of leadership do I choose to follow?" Throughout history, countless leaders have risen to power. Some have governed through military strength, others have gained public support through economic prosperity, and still others have inspired people through their personal example and sacrifice. Although leadership has taken different forms throughout the ages, one thing remains constant: people have always searched for leaders who can guide them toward a better future. Today, however, the Church presents us not with a worldly king or president, but with Jesus Christ, our King, who gave His life upon the Cross.

When we speak about the world in the twenty-first century, we cannot overlook the United States. America possesses tremendous military and economic power. President Donald Trump won the presidential elections in 2016 and 2024. Two expressions have come to symbolize his political vision: "Make America Great Again," commonly known as MAGA, and "America First." His administration has emphasized the protection of American interests in national security, the economy, trade, and foreign policy. It has actively used tariffs in dealing with other nations and demonstrated American military power during the war with Iran that began in late February of this year. This approach reflects a style of leadership that places great importance on strength, national interests, negotiation, and decisive action.

Today, however, the Church presents us with a very different kind of King. Jesus had no army. He lived in no palace. He possessed no great wealth, nor did He collect taxes from His people. Instead, He said, "Foxes have dens and birds of the sky have nests, but the Son of Man has nowhere to rest his head." The kingship of Jesus was fundamentally different from that of earthly rulers. He was not a king who gave orders from a position of privilege, but one who knelt down to wash the feet of His disciples. He was not a king who demanded sacrifices from others, but one who offered His own life for their salvation.

I would like to reflect on the kingship of Christ through four words: humility, sacrifice, generosity, and love.
First, the leadership of humility. Although Jesus was the Son of God, He chose to enter our world in the humblest circumstances. He was born in a manger in Bethlehem and lived an ordinary life in Nazareth as a carpenter. When His disciples argued about who among them was the greatest, Jesus taught them, "Whoever wishes to be great among you shall be your servant." At the Last Supper, He wrapped a towel around His waist and washed the feet of His disciples. Worldly leadership often focuses on how much honor and recognition others give us. The leadership of Christ, however, asks how willing we are to humble ourselves in service to others. In our families, our parish, and our society, the best leaders are not those who insist that everything be done their way. Rather, they are those who listen to others, understand their concerns, and are willing to reach out first with compassion and kindness.

Second, the leadership of sacrifice and generosity.
When Jesus fed the five thousand, He did not demand that the people provide food for themselves. Instead, He blessed the five loaves and two fish offered by a young boy and made it possible for everyone to share a meal. Ultimately, Jesus gave us not merely bread, but His very self. At the Last Supper, He declared, "This is my body, which will be given for you." The Cross became the throne of Christ the King, and the crown of thorns became His royal crown. The world often teaches us that power comes from possessing more. Jesus, however, showed us that true strength comes from giving more. His kingship is not about sacrificing others to preserve ourselves, but about sacrificing ourselves so that others may live. This is the true meaning of the kingship of Christ.

Finally, the leadership of love.
In today's Gospel, Jesus reveals the standard by which we will be judged at the end of our lives: "For I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me drink, a stranger and you welcomed me." When the righteous ask, "Lord, when did we see you hungry and feed you, or thirsty and give you drink?" Jesus responds: "Amen, I say to you, whatever you did for one of these least brothers of mine, you did for me." The concern of Christ the King was never limited to the powerful or influential. His heart was especially close to the poor, the sick, the lonely, the forgotten, and those who were pushed to the margins of society. Worldly rulers often seek the support of the strong and powerful. Jesus, however, stood beside the weak and vulnerable. This is the leadership of love.

The presidents and political leaders of our time will one day become part of history. Political power, economic influence, and military strength do not last forever. Yet the humility, sacrifice, generosity, and love that Jesus demonstrated two thousand years ago continue to inspire and transform countless lives. We are called to follow not the kings of this world, but Christ our King. We follow Him when we choose understanding and forgiveness within our families, when we serve quietly and faithfully in our parish without seeking recognition, when we share what we have with those in need, and when we treat the least among us with dignity and compassion.

Through these simple acts of faith and love, we help make the Kingdom of Christ present in our world. As we celebrate the final Sunday of the liturgical year, let us reflect once again on who truly reigns in our hearts and guides our lives. And let us always remember the words of Jesus: "Amen, I say to you, whatever you did for one of these least brothers of mine, you did for me."
